

Inclusion

Brought to you by the Diversity Advisory Committee

- Inclusion is a core value at MSU. What does it mean to be inclusive?
- It means we respect and value differences and encourage and create opportunities to capitalize on those differences.
- Diversity and Inclusion is one of three Presidential Statements on President Simon's website.
- She states: "We recognize that cross-cultural interactions may sometimes create moments of surprise or discomfort. But when perspectives clash, we have an individual and shared responsibility to guard against behaviors that demean or otherwise harm individuals and our community."
- Be aware and speak up when you see or hear somebody acting in a demeaning, offending or disrespectful way.

U.S. Department of Energy Office of Science
National Science Foundation
Michigan State University

With input from P. Granberry Russell, Sr. Advisor to the President for Diversity, and Director, MSU Office for Inclusion and Intercultural Initiatives